CANTON NOTES.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
CANTON, July 1.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

From all quarters comes the news of the increased activity of the secret societies and their actions are causing the Government very much trouble as there are not wanting those who consider this activity merely a precursor of worse things to come. The Acting Provincial Judge has strongly recommended to the Viceroy that Chung Cho Lung, the late chief of police in Homan, be appointed to a special office in the movement of these disturbers of the peace. Mr. Chung is said to be an officer of great ability who will probably be able to hold these people in check. The Society that is giving most trouble at present is the one known as the Dagges Society which is especially numerous round about Fatahan. It is said that some of the Imperial troops and police are members of this league and Admiral Li sent an urgent dispatch to the officer of the troops in Fatahan to make a thorough investigation among his men. The officer is said to have disguised himself and gone round the barracks to see what he could discover but there is no news that any one was caught. The chief of police in Fatahan also caused all the bedding and effects of the constables to be searched to see if any dagger or other insignia of the league could be found.

MONSIEURS ANNONCIER.

The system in vogue here of closing every street by a gate as soon as the sun sets is a source of great annoyance to people. This is especially the case in the Western Suburbs, where the people of the better class live and who often are out late. It has been the custom of the gate keepers to demand a sum of money before they would open the gate and this evil has grown to such an extent that some persons in the Western Suburbs have complained to the Tactful of Police. That official has issued a notice that this kind of extortion is to stop at once and any one found guilty of continuing it will be severely punished. The public is asked to assist by reporting all cases of attempted extortion.

MILITIA OR BANDITS?

Wun Tin Pui, a village elder in the Sun Wai District, has sent a petition to the Viceroy in which he accuses a detachment of having imported arms and ammunition into his village. This man gave out that he intended to start a local militia for the defence of the district whereas in fact the arms were supplied to the bandits who give such continual trouble. In that district Orders have been given for the immediate arrest of this "militia" and all the arms are to be seized. It is cases like this that explain to some extent the continual smuggling of arms into the country, and it is pity that there are not a few more headmen like Wun Tin Pui on the side of law and order.

WHY SUFFER FROM RHEUMATISM?

It is a mistake to allow anyone to suffer from Rheumatism. The only pain-killer always successful and for most cases a cure is obtained by applying Chamberlain's Pain-Balm. The relief from pain which it brings is almost instantaneous and the cure is permanent.

TIDE DEFENSE.

The opening of a new reign has a special significance for the National Church.

It may be well to recall a moment to recall the meaning and scope of this phrase, as well as the nature and origin of the special relation in which the King stands to the Church.

In every State the supreme executive jurisdiction belongs of right to the civil power, be it wielded by a pagan emperor, or a Christian monarch, or a Mahometan sovereign, or a Republic—Christian or non-Christian. The Head of this Realm, in whose name all functions of the State are performed, is, and must always be, "over all persons and over all things in these his dominions supreme."

This supremacy of the civil power extends not less over Free Churchmen, Roman Catholics, and Jews than over the Church of England. But beyond this inherent and general supremacy which the Sovereign, in the name and on behalf of the State, exercises over everybody within the realm, there is also a special and peculiar authority entrusted personally to the King with respect to the Church of England. This is formally described in her Thirty-seventh Article as the prerogative given to a "golly prince"—that is, to princes who accept the Christian faith.

In England twelve centuries ago, when the nation had accepted the Christian religion, the civil Government entered into the "divine relations" with the Church. Like the Israelite Kings of old, the Monarch was anointed to his office, and his consecration was held to invest his person with a sacred character.

The Coronation service has always borne a striking, and doubtless intentional, likeness to that for the consecration of a Bishop—a resemblance which, since the Reformation, has been made even clearer by the solemn delivery to the King—as to the Bishop—of the Bible.

By virtue of the fact entered into at his Coronation the Sovereign is accepted by the Church as her Protector, Guardian, and Supreme Governor. In no hostile spirit, but as themselves loyal sons of the Church, the Kings of England; both before and since the Norman Conquest, have asserted their visitatorial authority over the Church herein following the precedent set long before by the Christian emperors.

That this prerogative was, under Henry VIII, wielded more vigorously and extensively than ever before is true enough, but in its essence it was not of his invention; it had been claimed for centuries by his predecessors.

Even the Tudors, with all their strong and arbitrary assertion of kingly power, thought it in this respect to shield themselves behind precedent, appealing to the ancient rights of the Kings of England as Supreme Governors of the Church, and expressly repudiating any intention to transgress the prescribed limits of that recognised prerogative.

It is in no unwise sense that Churchmen hail King George V. as reigning Deo Gratia, and as worthily bearing the title Pile Defensor. It is with no sense of anomaly that the Church prays that the Sovereign may so act as one "knowing whose minister he is," and that his people may render him obedience, "only considering whose authority he hath."

Objections have sometimes been made against the Prayer-book that the petitions for the King are too numerous, and that in this respect it savours of "Emmanuelism." Surely there is all the difference between the Emmanuism theory, that the Church is nothing more than a department of the Civil Service, and the Prayer-book's acknowledgment of the Christian King's authority to govern and defend the Church.

Only a hundred years after the coming of St. Augustine an English King, of the name of Ethelbert, was crowned by the Pope, and the old Mass of Decree, from pure delight, proceeded to have his feet on the body of the dead emperor.

Our tenets were planted in a small open glade 100 yards from the dead emperor. The night was clear, the stars shone brightly, and the young moon hung just above the horizon. The Emperor was quickly killed; and the man who had slain him, standing in a strange monk's robe and late in the night, the sickening light left their faces moment in black obscurity, and the next brought into bold relief their stony, staring, and ghastly faces.

BIG GAME HUNT.

How Mr. Roosevelt Killed His First Elephant.

Mr. Roosevelt in another long article in the series published by the Times, gives a graphic account of his first elephant hunt.

Leaving their camp in the open glade on the mountain side, the party struck into the great forest, and in an instant (says Mr. Roosevelt) the sun was shut from sight by the thick screen of wet foliage. For was a riot of twisted vines, interlacing the trees and bushes. Only the elephant paths, which, of every age, crisscrossed and recrossed it higher and higher, made it possible.

"Two or three elephants stood near a single bull, one of a party of three. Then Cunningham and the 'Nadero' redoubled their caution. They all continually tossed the 'wind,' warning the free boys and lighting matches to see from the smoke what the allies were near the ground. Each time after an hour's steady stepping and crawling along the twisted trail, a slight shift of the wind in the almost still air gave out scent to the game, and away it went before we resumed our walk."

"On about the 10th of August, at last, we came in sight of the mighty game. The trail took a twist to one side, and there, thirty yards in front of us, we made out part of the ear and massive head of an elephant resting his trunk on the branches of a young tree—elephants hardly ever feed at noon. A couple of minutes passed before, by cautious scrutiny, we were able to tell whether the animal we could see was a cow or a bull, and whether, if a bull, it carried heavy enough horns. Then we saw that it was a big bull with good ivory. It turned its head in my direction, and I saw its eye, and I fired a bullet to one side of the ear, at a spot which I thought would lead to the brain. I struck exactly where I aimed, but the head of an elephant is so massive and the brain small, and the bullet missed it."

However, the shock momentarily stunned the beast. He stumbled forward, half-falling and as he recovered I fired with the second barrel, again aiming for the brain. This time the bullet sped true, and as I lowered the rifle from my shoulder I saw the great lord of the forest come crashing to the ground.

CHARGED BY A BULL ELEPHANT.

But at that very instant, before there was a moment's time in which to reload, the thick bushes parted suddenly to my left front, and through them surged the vast bulk of a charging bull elephant, the lastest mass of tough, convulsed, snapping, like packhounds, before his trunk. He was so close that he could have touched me with his trunk. I leaped to one side and dodged behind a tree trunk, opening the rifle, throwing out the empty shell and slipping in two cartridges. Meanwhile Cunningham fired right and left, at the same time throwing himself into the bushes on the other side. Both his bullets went home, and the bull stopped short in his charge, wheeled, and immediately disappeared in the thick cover. We ran forward but the forest had closed over his wake. We heard him trumpet shrilly, and then all sounds ceased.

The 'Nadero' who had quite properly disappeared when the second bull charged, now went forward, and soon returned with the report that he had laid at speed.

DELIVER OF THE SKIN.

So back we turned to where the dead animal lay, and I felt proud indeed as I stood by the immense bulk of the slain monster and put my hand on the trophy. The bulk weighed a hundred and twenty pounds the pair. There was the usual scene of joyful excitement among the hunters—who had behaved so gallantly—and among the wild bush people who had done the tracking for us, and we Cunningham had predicted, the old Mass Decree, from pure delight, proceeded to have his feet on the body of the dead elephant.

Our tenets were planted in a small open glade 100 yards from the dead emperor. The night was clear, the stars shone brightly, and the young moon hung just above the horizon. The Emperor was quickly killed; and the man who had slain him, standing in a strange monk's robe and late in the night, the sickening light left their faces moment in black obscurity, and the next brought into bold relief their stony, staring, and ghastly faces.

THE NEW BUDGET.

SOME three or four months behind its time the British Budget for the financial year 1910-11 has made its appearance. The reason of its delay has, of course, a direct connection with the protracted struggle that centred round its predecessor, which as is well known, precipitated a General Election in January last, and so filled up the best part of a year between the time of its introduction and of its actual passage into law. In the meantime the situation had naturally become complex, not to say chaotic, so much so that the working balance of £371,000 which Mr Lloyd George imagined he would have at the conclusion of the year has now totally disappeared and its place been taken by a somewhat staggering deficiency of £26,248,000. One is not at all surprised to learn that in introducing the new Budget on Thursday night the Chancellor of the Exchequer had the temerity to attribute this admittedly undesirable state of affairs to what he described as "the Constitutional question," by which we assume he means the justifiable action of the House of Lords in seeking the opinion of the electorate upon proposals altogether revolutionary in character. It is all very well for Mr Lloyd George to, try in this way to fasten the whole blame on to someone else's shoulders. Perhaps it was just as well for him that the Upper Chamber did interfere; otherwise he would now have had to face alone the full brunt of an attack which the fruits of bad financing would surely have inspired. To come to a closer examination of the new Budget, it can at once be stated that it is in no sense startling or ingenious. There is to be no change whatever in the duties, neither is provision made for any new taxes. So it is merely a case of "As you were." As there is apparently no provision made for remission of any of the existing taxes or duties it seems that the objectionable features of last year's Budget are still to be perpetuated. Herein lies the chief interest of the Government's latest financial proposals. Apart from that they call for little notice, and in any case they appear to point to the conclusion that Mr Lloyd George has been so severely chastened and humbled by the protests which his last effort provoked that he has wisely shrank from embarking on any more fanciful, and, at the same time, reckless and damaging financial experiments.

A question which might well be asked now is whether the House of Lords will see its way to accept a Budget which is practically little other than a copy of one to which they recently assented, not because they believed it to be for the benefit of the country but because they felt in honour bound to give it easy passage on account of what had happened at the General Election. By remaining true to their promise in this way the Peers have, in a sense, stultified themselves in pronouncing on the present situation. To this extent the Ministerialists have perhaps won a point in tactics. The details which RETURN has supplied are somewhat meagre, but such as are given may as well be compared with last year's figures. We see in the first place that the deficiency of well over 26½ million which the Chancellor has to face contrasts with a sum of about 15 millions which represented last year's adverse balance. But this shortness is not so pronounced as it would appear at first sight, for we notice that in the estimated revenue for this year there is an item of well over 30 millions representing arrears from last year, of which 26½ millions have already been collected. The proposed expenditure of £198,930,000 is £36,461,000 more than was provided for last year, and it will be observed with gratification by all Imperialists that the 48½ millions to be devoted to the Navy is some four millions over and about the gross estimate for 1909-10. The estimated increase in expenditure in balanced by an almost equivalent expectation of growth in revenue; the figures under this head show an increase of about a twelve month ago. It will be noticed that a little more is expected this year from the tea tax, while the death duties, which were last year very considerably increased, are still looked upon as likely to be productive of a good sum. We have heard much from time to time from the lips of Liberal statesmen on the of social urgency reforms. But we look in vain in the financial provisions for 1910-11 to discover the means by which these are to be carried into effect. True the estimated surplus is to be devoted "partly to technical education and partly to removing the pauper disqualification in respect of Old Age Pensions," but how much is a sum of less than a million pounds to accomplish in these directions? So we doubt very much if the working classes—that section of the public of which the Liberals invariably pose as protectors and defenders—will be over-satisfied with Mr Lloyd George's attempt at arranging the country's income and expenditure. They will assuredly demand at no remission of existing taxes, at no provision for much needed measures of social reform. In so far as it does not branch out into any new Socialist and revolutionary ideas we can welcome the 1910-11 Budget; and in that it seems to lead us out of an almost hopeless financial tangle into something approaching common sense we can praise it. Still, whether the Government will be able to carry it through in view of the threatened schism of the Irish Nationalists and the advanced Radicals in highly problematical. Much depends upon the outcome of the present conference on the Constitutional problem. It is no use speculating on the matter; however, in the new historical phrase of Mr Asquith, "we must wait and see."

Mountains higher than Everest are claimed to have been discovered by Dr. T. G. Longstaff during an exploration in the Eastern Karakoram, a region of high Asia. He told the members of the Royal Geographical Society that he saw a group of very lofty peaks identified as the "Karakoram Range." He considered the chief peak was 27,640 ft. high.

China states Russia only possesses mining rights within the Chinese Eastern Railway zone and that that ground requests the suspension of the work.

Near Tangshing, is a village named the Twelve Towns. Near this resided two clans of unequal strength. It appears that owing to some trivial quarrel the clans determined to fight it out and it came to pass that the village, which was the weaker, was surrounded on all sides by the stronger. The invaders thereupon set fire to the beleaguered village, and there was a general flight. In the end it was found that more than thirty persons have lost their lives, while in addition there were many wounded, and a great deal of property was burnt and otherwise destroyed.

At a place called Linfa, near Fatahan, the yearly worship of the local deity is very popular. This year was no exception to the rule, and the "great day" was on the 10th of the month. It appears when the crowd was at its largest, being composed mostly of women—robbers who had been on the lookout took some of the burning candles and applied them to the robes of worshippers. In the panic which ensued the robbers possessed upon the frightened women, and robbed them right and left, clearing off with nearly all the jewellery.

A meeting of the Sanitary Board is to be held on Tuesday afternoon when the orders of the day include:—Minute by the Head of the Sanitary Department relative to special care of graves in the Colonial Cemetery; report of the committee; three complaints against the City Conservancy Contractor; arrangement of duties of Sanitary Inspectors during the later half of 1910; application for a modification of the requirements of section 188 of the Public Health and Buildings Ordinance 1903 in respect of the proposed extension of the Tung Wah Hospital and a New Refuge Home.

The Pinang Gazette alleges that the gravity of the recent conflict in Kedah was much exaggerated, that none of the charges made by the Tangkuts against Mr Maxwell were in any way serious and that most of them were absolutely frivolous. The same paper says it has good reason to believe that the Governor, remarked, at the recent interview, that the Malays did not seem to have genuine grievances, and he did not hold out any hope of the request for Mr Maxwell's removal being granted. It says, further, that the Sultan of Kedah is "extremely angry" because of the false position in which he has been placed by the excessive zeal of some of his officials to protect his "Independence." The Gazette concludes by stating that the agitation against Mr Maxwell was actively fomented by one or two interested Europeans, and was due largely to fear of drastic reforms shortly to be introduced into some of the Government departments at Alor Star, particularly one which recently had a good deal to do with the outside public.

James Hallows, one of the best all-round cricketers turned out by Lancashire, died after an illness lasting several weeks. In Java, the use of the pistol as a method of settling differences has been unknown among the natives. But, early last month, it was resorted to by a Javanese villager, who, on quarrelling with his wife, shot her with a revolver, and then, killed himself with another shot. They had hardly been married a year, but she was tired of him and pressed for a divorce and this he resented.

It is notified in the Gazette that the Government are prepared to dispose of certain buildings erected for the accommodation of officers engaged on the construction of the Kowloon-Canton railway but no longer required for that purpose. The buildings in question are situated either near the south and north face of Beacon Hill tunnel and at Tai-Po. They include 16 bungalows and a large number of other buildings.

The driving of American and Russian petroleum from the general European market is said to be the object of a British syndicate to which the Lisbon government has granted a concession for the working of all oil deposits in Portuguese Timor, the most easterly island of the Sunday group, in the Malay archipelago. Experts say the field is practically inexhaustible, and so accessible that oil can be sold at a ridiculously low price to European consumers.

A friendly suit is about to be brought in the courts to determine whether an aviator may fly over another man's property. It is proposed that Curteis, a Wright brother, or some other bird-man, shall fly over the house of a member of the Aero Club of America, so that the member can bring suit against the aeronaut for trespass. The whole matter has a serious as well as a ludicrous side. The common law has a maxim that he who owns the earth owns up to the skies and down to the lower regions. Of course this maxim was invented before air ships were dreamed of, but that does not make it any the less troublesome. If aeronauts can be sued for trespass whenever they fly over a gentleman's farm, the successful contestants in next year's international aeroplane cup races may lose more in damage suits than they gain in prizes.

The Times of India, on the subject of a memorial to King Edward, says: "Our own view is that if an All-India Memorial is to be decided upon, a verdict to that effect should be returned at once and that the proper position for that memorial is Bombay. No other city in India has such claims after Calcutta as Bombay, and Calcutta is at some remote date to have a memorial to her late Majesty Queen Victoria. There is no city in India, after Calcutta, where a memorial to King Edward would attract such attention or be observed by so many people as in this gateway to India."

GREAT STORM AT CANTON.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) CANTON, July 1.

For days past the people of this city have been supplicating their favorite gods for rain. For some time previous to the past two days the heat has been terrific and the destitution was increasing at an alarming rate. In the temple of the God of the Walled City the officials set up a new altar which was dedicated some days ago with many quaint ceremonies. Now the gods have heard and have sent rain and plenty of it. About midnight on Wednesday the wind began to blow and before an hour had passed it was blowing very hard indeed. All through the night it continued to be equally with rain at intervals. The next morning the river was much higher than usual, the tide running up at quite an abnormal rate, even the steam launches making but slow progress against it. The typhoon signals were hanging out from the Customs building and the majority of the sampans that usually lie off Shamone had taken refuge in the creek. All the morning it continued to blow and rain at frequent intervals but in the afternoon the rain came down in perfect torrents and the wind blew with fury. The trees were bent as though they were but small sticks. In the dry many of the awnings which the Chinese place over the streets in the summer to keep out the sun were blown down and some of the streets were made almost impassable in consequence. This state of things went on until about nine in the evening when the wind died down and the rain gradually decreased. To-day although the sky was looking very threatening in the early morning the weather is warm and bright and all things are looking very much better for the rain. There is no doubt that the wind has done a good deal of damage but that is more than counterbalanced by the good that the copious rain will do. In the country districts of the province things were getting desperate owing to the lack of rain and as it is well known the people are more likely than ever to commit crimes when their conditions prevail. It is rather interesting to hear the reasons that the native assign to the late drought. According to the priests the gods are angry because the people of the city are too fond of seeing good things and enjoying themselves generally and such being the case find no time for propitiating the gods. All kinds of weird tales are in circulation just at present, including one of a miraculous birth of a child at Shik Lung, but no doubt now that the rain has come these things will soon be forgotten.
